Description:

From Publishers Weekly Goleman's subpar eighth Event Group (after 2012's Ripper) focuses on the Jeddah, a little documented, supposedly vanished tribe of warriors responsible for the Hebrew escape from Egypt and victory at Jericho. In fact, the elusive warriors, their bestial Golia allies, and the secret weapon of the Hebrews survive to the present day. In Romania, events march towards unsanctioned revelations about the Golia and their forgotten role in long cherished history that could trigger war. No reader will ever mistake Goleman for Tim Powers, an sci-fiSF and fantasy author who uses secret history well. Not only are his characters unmemorable and his use of communities like the Gypsies and Israelis clichéd at best, but his grasp of basic tetrapod anatomy is flawed. Leaden prose doesn't help a plot that should be break-neck but instead plods from confrontation to confrontation. Agent: Bob Mecoy, Creative Book Services. (July)

From The eighth novel in the Event Group series offers a unique spin on the Book of Exodus and the defeat of Pharaoh's army. An archaeological remnant from the fallen city of Jericho unveils the petrified remains of an animal that everyone thought existed only in books and movies. Some want this remnant destroyed, while others think it's fake. The Event Group knows it's real, and, when one of their own appears to be a traitor, the stakes could not be higher. While this is going on, construction workers at a hotel and casino being built in Romania have begun to disappear. The mix of legends and history has always been an asset to this series, and Golemon's imagination seems to know no bounds. Fans of the TV series Warehouse 13 or the action-adventure novels of Cussler and Rollins will lap this up. --Jeff Ayers
