Description:

From Publishers Weekly Bestseller Michaels's Sisterhood series (Vendetta, etc.) goes out with a bang and a wink as the Virginia vigilantes—Myra, Kathryn, Alexis, Isabelle, Nikki and Anna—seek justice for Yoko Akia, a young florist. Yoko wants to punish her father, who bought, impregnated and discarded her teenage mother, who died after giving birth to her. The lethal ladies are shocked to discover Yoko's dad is none other than Michael Lyons, an award-winning film star with another nasty secret: he's been buying and selling Asian women as sex slaves to prominent businessmen. The Sisterhood's fearless male cohorts, notably Myra's pal, Charles Martin, a former British secret agent, lend assistance, but in the end the female vigilantes must confront Lyons in L.A. on their own with two nosy reporters hot on their trail. Some industrial strength glue comes in quite handy. Michaels rewrites the rules of the revenge game to include a clever—if improbable—escape clause. From In the latest in the Revenge of the Sisterhood series, Michaels brings back the usual suspects as the final lady of Pinewood gets her chance at justice. Yoko's mother was a sex slave left to die by her father, a famous actor. Not only does he dabble in sex with underage foreign girls, he also runs a profitable side business fulfilling orders from others who are so inclined. It's a shocking revelation, and the sisterhood is determined to shut him and his operation down. But along with the usual worries associated with such a mission, the reporters they thought they had seen the last of are getting close to the truth about them. Even though Yoko's revenge is sweet, it is overshadowed by the women's arrest for previous attempts of vigilantism. Can this really be the end of the Ladies of Pinewood? Michaels wraps everything up neatly and satisfactorily, but her fans will be sad to see the end of a favorite cast of characters. Maria Hatton
